objects with perfect distinctness. — MRS. AN. SOLOMONS has invented and patented SPECTACLES LENSES of this important power. The valuable advantage derived from this apparatus is, that vision impaired by pressure, and strengthened; very eyes are enabled to employ their sight at the most minute objects, and see with those lenses of a much less magnifying power, than they otherwise require. The effect of the apparatus does not require the frequent change of spectacles, and is free from all harmful assistance. Persons who go to the dangerous effects of the use of spectacles, and are obliged to change them so often, will find by sending a pair of spectacles, or one of the glasses and asking the distance P, on the eyes they can read small letters, and those who have a pair of spectacles, and a standing glass, or a microscope, of made to order, will find it a saving of all other means. — Floodgate, opposite the York Hotel.
